held an informal reception on the stand.

As the great audience melted away Taft pictures and Republican documents were handed out by the ushers and party workers.

The meeting could hardly have been more successful from any viewpoint. Chief Werner was present with a large squad of police officers, and barring a few good-natured interruptions now and then, the order was perfect. The building was brilliantly lighted, and there were elaborate decorations on every hand. Large portraits of Taft and Sherman were suspended at either and sherman were suspended at either and and over the stand, while dozens

The run from Danville was made without incident, other than that the numerous party had a chance to take a much-needed nap. All were tired with the strenuous life of campaigning, and the little rest had on the train was found very refreshing. Arriving fifteen minutes shead of schedule time, the train was met by but a few, but the numbers gradually grew larger until the start was made for the Horse Show Building. Five members of the city detective force, headed by Captain Tomlinson, were on hand early, and the "Constitution." the car in which the Republican candidate was quartered, was surrounded by officers of the law.

Incre was little demonstration until he had gotten well out on the platform, when the crowd gave him a rousing welcome. Midway of the procession, he walked straight to the automobile awaiting him, apparently un(Continued on Seventh Page.)
